CISAC – the International Confederation of Societies of Authors and Composers – is the organisation representing authors societies worldwide. In this role CISAC is the global data authority on creators' royalties.

We compile and publish comprehensive data and analysis of collections by our member societies in over 120 countries.

CISAC is now hiring a freelance consultant data analyst to work on the annual CISAC Global Collections Report, to be published in October 2022. The GCR is a highly respected, comprehensive, and definitive source of industry data and analysis of authors' rights and royalties.

The report covers data and trends in collections for music, audiovisual, visual arts, drama, and literature. The publication is used by members, creators, policy makers, media, and stakeholders in the creative sector.

The project

This is a part-time temporary 5-month freelance contract, from mid-May to mid-October 2022. The project is expected to take up approximately 30-35 days in total.

Working as an integral member of the Report team, the data analyst will be responsible for:

- Compiling and verifying collections data received from member societies worldwide, working closely with the CISAC business team
- Analysing key trends by repertoire, region and usage, including interviews with members
- Bringing market insight from a variety of third-party analysis
- Drafting and editing sections of text for the Report, liaising with the Communications team

The data analyst will jointly report to the Director of Business and Director of Communications

Fluency in English is required. Knowledge of French and Spanish would be highly advantageous. Candidates can work remotely but should be available to travel occasionally to CISAC's office in Paris.
