The Private Copying Global Study 2026 provides the most comprehensive analysis to date of private copying laws and remuneration frameworks worldwide. The report examines legal provisions, remuneration mechanisms and revenues related to private copying across 196 countries and five global regions.

How to navigate this report

Given the scale of the study, readers may wish to approach the report in different ways depending on their interests. The guide below highlights useful entry points.

For a quick overview

If you are looking for a high-level understanding of the study's main findings, begin with:

- Key insights – a short overview of the study's main takeaways
- Executive summary – key conclusions and global insights included in the report

For policy and industry insights

Readers interested in legal and policy developments will find detailed analysis in the following sections:

- Global overview – key trends shaping private copying remuneration worldwide
- Economic analysis – global revenue trends and the economic importance of private copying
- Regional analysis – developments across Africa, Asia, Europe, the Americas and Oceania

These sections provide context on how private copying remuneration frameworks operate and how they are evolving in response to technological change.

For country-specific information

The report includes detailed country profiles for 196 countries, organised by region. Each profile provides information on:

- the legal framework governing private copying
- the level of implementation of remuneration mechanisms
- tariffs, devices and collections where available

Countries are classified according to their level of implementation, ranging from jurisdictions with no private copying exception to those with fully functioning remuneration mechanisms.

Understanding the regional structure

Country profiles are organised under five regional sections:

- Africa
- Asia
- Europe
- Americas
- Oceania

Each regional section begins with a short analysis highlighting key developments and trends.

Navigating the report

To make navigation easier, the report includes:
